

HUGO LX

(My Love is Underground / Balance - FR)

Patience is a true virtue, and few know it more than french-born, nomadic music producer Hugo LX. After a whole childhood dedicated to meticulously taping house radio shows, carefully learning soundcraft since age 11, and quietly building a solid and very eclectic record collection, his first career highlights came when, being only 17, he started producing his first releases, then collaborating with luminaries such as Large Professor, Diamond D, Gift Of Gab and later on with Oddisee, Elzhi from Slum Village, or Stones Throw's very own Homeboy Sandman, crafting jazz and funk infused grooves with a classic trademark SP1200 sound.

Following these very creative time span, that saw the release of 2 EPs, 2 singles and the critically acclaimed "Funky As Usual" album, he left Hip-Hop aside and started travelling, mainly in Japan where he produced most of the music set to be released soon, and cultivated his passion for japanese jazz, electronic or ambient music, leading to a radical shift in his production style.

Wanting to expand his musical experience and feeling frustrated by a shelved album project and a certain lack of creative control, he decided to take 90 degrees turn and went back to his Deep House roots, under the guidance of parisian house activist Nick V. This moment marked a turnaround and a kind of renaissance, as he quickly gained the attention of respected pioneers such as Karizma, Chez Damier or DJ Spinna, thus being drafted by top shelf labels such as MCDE, My Love Is Underground, Balance or R2 Records. His singular releases allowed him to claim a special spot in the very active parisian house scene, subsequently granting him occasions to play his soulful, energetic and jazz infused selections in respected venues such as Concrete or Djoon in Paris, Jardin Suspendus in Marseille, and to hit the road as well, whether in UK, Germany or Japan.
